Create a new application and select Facebook as the default login provider. We will need to implement that first. Create a new page and name it facebook. In index.html, add the following markup: We will render the login button and process the login request. Create a new module and name it facebook. Create a new file, app/code/community/Fuzi/Facebook/Block/Index.php and add the following code to it: I just have a question, this app is working fine, with our Facebook settings, but when the user sign in for the first time it save a session and a cookie. What I mean is that the user after login, the session cookie is stored inside the server, and this session contains the facebook access token, I would like to know if this session is stored inside the server and who can read it and have access to the session, because if this info is stored in the server then there is a security risk. Thank you for your contribution, it's been a long time since I posted in this forum. I have two questions: 1- Is there a way to reset the password of Facebook Account without using Facebook Graph API? 2- In the case of the user has more than one Facebook account, which one is used to sign in when someone clicks on login with Facebook. Hi there, I have a problem. I'm trying to setup a Facebook Login in my site. I would like to ask you how you have implemented it. Have you made a page to login with facebook? If you do that how did you render the login button and the page? After the login process, I redirect to a new page and nothing happens. I'm trying to do it using this code: Thanks for your answer. I have looked at your sample and it works perfectly. I have found a problem while using codeigniter though. When I load my facebook page, it doesn't redirect me to facebook anymore, it stays on the page instead. Do you have any idea why? Yes, sorry for my typo. I was trying to post it earlier and I had not submitted it. I was looking for a complete example of a Facebook login with codeigniter. You provided me a very good example and I'm using it now. Thanks a lot. After the login process, I redirect to a new page and nothing happens. I'm trying 82157476af
